

Media kit for Nancy Brown of Capability:Mom

I have been blogging since the olden days (okay, 2010) but recommending things to my family and friends for much longer than that. I never recommend anything I don't believe in. I'm chatty, in real life and on-line. I share, maybe over-share? I am also known for doing my homework (I interviewed 8 pediatricians and at least that many preschools when my children were young). I still am like that.

I am frugal, but not to the point of ridiculous-ness (mostly because I'm so drastically disorganized). I do not extreme coupon, (or really, ever remember to bring my coupons at all), but wish I did and admire those who do. I bring my own grocery bags to the market (except when I don't, which happens so frequently that I have accumulated an impressive collection of bags). Sad, really.

I like to cook, bake and make things that aren't too complicated. I repair things around the house myself unless it is beyond my meager skill set, and then I call in the professionals. First my father and occasionally my brother, or yes, sigh, I pay people.

Product Reviews and Giveaways

If you want to send me free stuff, I am all over that, so go ahead. I always tell the truth and if I can't say something nice, I was taught not to say anything at all (that doesn't really work for me personally but professionally, I can manage it).

Restaurant Reviews

I love to eat. I even like to talk (while I 'm eating), or write about it and my phone takes a decent picture, too.

Book Reviews

I love to read (almost as much as I like to eat and talk), and read almost anything, but please do not send me anything of questionable content. What does that mean? If I would be embarrassed to read it in an orthodontist's waiting room, you probably shouldn't send it. FYI - No Fifty Shades of Grey, thanks.

I also love to travel and would like to do more of it, so offer me the trip of a lifetime, really, go ahead. Heck, I'll go away for a weekend, too.
